THE STORY

about the story ...

- “You don’t have to be perfect” an article in Reader’s Digest by Harold S. Kushner
- “ The Missing Piece” by Shel Silverstein

PROJECT GOALS

- to make a silent film with no dialogues or narration to tell the story
- to get an overall experience of doing an animation project
- to get a hang of pre-production process
- to design characters
- to explore into the realm of 3D computer generated animation

STORY TO SCREENPLAY

how the story evolved to the final structure

- The three act form of films
- Making a silent film with no dialogues or narration
- Setting up the conflict ; with a dream sequence at the beginning
- eliminated the part where the circle sings to express its desire to be complete
- added an additional character to show the motive and give a sort of well defined conflict for the story
- deciding on the climax of the story

SCREENPLAY

Major sequences ...

- Dream sequence
- Getting up and start rolling
- Slow fade-ins for journey (introduction to various places and climates)
- Having a nice time
- Introduction of the missing piece
- Trying out various pieces
- Travelling for searching match
- Getting the perfect match
- Fast rolling sequence (covers most of the places and climates)
- Realization (flash-back into the past)
- Leaving the piece
